

Gender Aware Teaching and Learning

*Why should lecturers be concerned about gender in their teaching?
What is meant by “gender aware teaching, learning and assessment”?
How does one develop gender aware pedagogies?*

29. Oktober 2015
09.00 – 13.00
Odense Campus,
Room 094

Dr. Eileen Trauth, Professor of Information Sciences & Technology at The Pennsylvania State University, will address these questions during an interactive workshop on October 29, 2015.

She will draw upon the results of her research on gender in the science and technology professions, and her university courses on gender and diversity to develop awareness of the relationship between gender and teaching, learning and assessment.

In this workshop attendees will learn to recognize teaching and learning situations with regard to gender awareness, and to identify ways in which gender-aware approaches could support teaching and learning.

This workshop is open to lecturers in training as well as those who are interested in learning more about how to incorporate a gender perspective into their scholarly activities (i.e. teaching, research and service).

Register please email
Anne Grete Petersen
agpetersen@sdu.dk
before 20.Okttober 2015

The course is organised by SDUUP and will be open to all colleagues, it's half a day, 9 to 13.00 and carries 0.25 ECTS.

Centre for Teaching and Learning
University of Southern Denmark